Dogs build man's ego, other animals deflate it. This is the reason for the universal bond of affection between dogs and humans. A dog's adoring looks and unselfish devotion makes man the center of his universe. A dog will often not eat when his master is missing; he is restless and unhappy until the object of his affection returns. Other animals may accept affection, but offer little in exchange.

Only a dog will starve with his master, and only a dog will suffer base indignities to remain at his master's side. These are the basic reasons why man is so fond of the dog. The dog's attributes help man compensate for shortcomings in his personality.

A dog will make a retiring man feel important, because of the attention showered upon him by his pet.

AN AGGRESSIVE dog will make a meek person feel more self-assurance by reflected aggressiveness. In many cases a dog takes the place of a child and is cared for and loved by a childless woman, or by an older person whose children no longer need such personal attention.

In all instances the dog, with his understanding nature and uncomplaining companion. Small wonder that the dog is man's best friend.

Psychologists agree that the greatest number of dog owners fall into the class that are first attracted to the dog for one or more of the above reasons.

THIS GROUP may be termed pet owners. The remainder of dog owners may also be dog lovers, but their primary reason for owning one or more dogs is for another purpose. They may be classified into three groups: commercial dog breeders whose main business is to sell dogs; show dog owners, who have a basic interest in breed improvement; and those who own dogs for utilitarian reasons, such as hunting, guard duty, herding and the like.

In almost every case, persons in the last three categories become "pet owners" sooner or later since working with dogs always builds respect and love for the noble dog.

BOWSER BROWSINGS — Never clip dogs to keep them cool. Nature has provided some dogs with long and heavy coats in order to protect them from the hot sun, flies, fleas and mosquitoes. A long haired dog that is clipped loses this protection.

Recommended for your dog library: Sir Richard Glyn's "Champion Dogs of the World." This could be the greatest and most complete book on dogs ever to roll off the presses; a must for all dog lovers. Thumbing through its handsomely bound pages I found 128 remarkable, eye-catching full color photographs of actual champions representing 128 different breeds of dog. The text spotlights the general history of the modern dog and the individual developments of the breeds. Sir Richard Glyn is chairman of the famous Cruft's International Dog Show in London, England. The international panel of dog experts include Winnie Barber (British), Stanley Dangerfield (British), Maxwell Riddle (American), and Ivan Swedrup (Swedish). Book is being simultaneously published in 10 countries and nine languages. "Champion Dogs of the World" is priced at $12.95 and is available at your local bookstore or direct from the publishers—Double-day & Co., Inc., 277 Park Ave., NYC.

PROFESSIONAL dog handler Lee Wenrick is a mighty proud fellow these days. At the recent Silver State Kennel Club all breed dog show in Las Vegas he handled a rare chocolate Labrador Retriever to AK Championship, a coveted distinction, indeed. There are many black Labs but only Al and Irene Harris (Al-Reen Kennels) of Orange, Calif. . . charged in a $150 robbery will get his day in court. Police arrested the dog, Ohio, when they couldn't find his master, who they believed responsible for a break-in at a local food market. The place was left in shambles, but there were few clues besides the muddy paw prints discovered on the floor. They checked out the prints and matched them against a dog they found. No one knew where the owner was, so the dog was booked and locked up. Since the police don't know the dog's name, they're calling him "Ohio" because of his Ohio registration tag. How about that?

BREED OF THE WEEK — Whippet . . . Many people in and out of dogdom consider the Whippet to be the fastest dog in his poundage category. He has been clocked at speeds of 35 miles per hour. The symmetrical little speed demon has enjoyed great favor in England for more than a hundred years. In Great Britain, the Whippet has been known as the "poor-man's race horse" due to his extensive use in racing. In appearance the Whippet is a scaled down replica of the Greyhound or an enlarged edition of the Italian Greyhound. His outlines are as gracefully balanced as his mutt and jeff cousins. Most dog authorities believe that the Whippet was produced by breeding small Greyhounds to various terriers and the results of these matings crossed with Italian Greyhounds thus giving the breed much of its present refinement and elegance.
